

V. Kollias holds a PhD is Assistant Professor in the Department of Primary Education (DPE) of the University of Thessaly. He teachers the courses Basic Concepts in Physical Sciences and Internet Learning Environments, in the undergraduate program of the Department. He also teaches in the two Masters' Programs of the Department: "Teaching and Learning with ICT and development of Educational Material" in the Program "Learning Design and Education Material's development in Modern Learning Environments" and "ICT applications in Teaching and in the Administration of Education" in the Program "Educational Sciences: Educational Administration and Management". His research interests include the design of collaborative learning environments for teaching Natural Science (especially with ICT support), teacher training in the educational use of ICT, blended learning environments, the influence of climate crisis in learning Natural Science and learning with ICT.